smith, Michael	-	9/28/2011	-	Following are the questions referred to in recent phone conversation: 1) What time US RCC first receive our beacon alert? (NOAA started getting signal around 2051 UT (PM PDT)). 2) What information was contained in that alert? a) GPS coordinates? Is s coordinates were given? b) What was coordinate format? Degrees, decimal minutes else? c) What Map Datum is provided from the alert, or assumed by US RCC? NAD2 something else? d) Or does SARSAT system just ignore Map Datum on assumption t the PLB coordinate transmission isn't sufficiently precise to make map datum differe computationally relevant. NOAA says limitation on coordinate bits in alert transmissi to plus/minus 4 seconds (or roughly 400 feet at our latitude). 3) What processing d apply to the alert data? Does US RRC review/add to data stream the information fro registration? 4) In our case, who did US RRC then contact in the next stage of disse beacon alert and deploying SAR resources? a) Was it California Emergency Managemen other entities or agencies?
